Memorandum on the Rainfall of June and July and the Probable Amount during August and September 1957

1. WEATHER IN INDIA IN JUNE AND JULY

June—Abnormal delay in the setting in of the southwest monsoon over the greater part of the country was the main feature of the weather during June 1957. Even after its onset, the monsoon remained generally weak.

The southwest monsoon advanced into Comorin-Maldives area, the Andaman Sea and the adjoining southeast Bay by the 30th May. Further advance of the Arabian Sea branch into Kerala took place by the 1st June, about the normal time. Its northward advance was maintained until the 5th when it had extended to coastal Mysore. Thereafter a lull in the activity of both the branches of the monsoon set in. The Arabian Sea branch became practically confined to Kerala and the Bay branch was confined to the southeast and east Central Bay until about the middle of the month. The Arabian Sea branch then advanced as a feeble current into south Konkan on the 19th and into north Konkan and Maharashtra on the 22nd. A low pressure area which formed over the west Central Bay on the 22nd and moved north-westward as a low pressure wave, served to usher in the monsoon into Andhra Pradesh also on the 22nd and into Madhya Pradesh and Vidarbha by the 24th. The Bay branch of the monsoon also advanced as a feeble current into Assam on the 21st and into West Bengal and Orissa on the 23rd. It strengthened over West Bengal and Orissa on the 25th, when it also extended into Bihar and Chota Nagpur. A trough of low pressure which formed in the east Central Arabian Sea off the north Konkan coast on the 24th, lay off the Kathiawar coast on the 25th and became unimportant thereafter. It served to extend the monsoon into south Gujarat on the 24th, into Saurashtra-Kutch and north Gujarat on the 27th and into southeast Rajasthan on the 28th.

Locally heavy to very heavy rain occurred in Saurashtra-Kutch and Gujarat on the 28th when Surat reported 14 cm and Porbandar 13 cm. According to press reports, rail road and telecommunications over these areas were dislocated due to the heavy rains.

The total rainfall of June was in large excess in the Bay Islands, Rayalaseema and south Mysore, in moderate excess in Kerala and in slight excess in Gujarat, coastal Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and north Mysore. It was normal in Gangetic West Bengal, Saurashtra-Kutch, the Konkan, Maharashtra and Madras. It was in slight defect in Assam, Sub-Himalayan West Bengal, east Rajasthan, Vidarbha and coastal Mysore, in moderate defect in rest northeast India, the Punjab (I), west Rajasthan and Madhya Pradesh and in large defect in Uttar Pradesh. Data in respect of Jammu-Kashmir, Himachal Pradesh and the Arabia Sea Islands are not available. Averaged over the plains of India, the rainfall during the month of June was in defect by 14 per cent.

July—The monsoon extended into the remaining parts of the country during the first fortnight of July, where again about two weeks behind the normal time. Except for a spell of strong monsoon over Uttar Pradesh, Punjab (I) and Bihar during the third week, the activity of the monsoon during the month was generally moderate but sustained with fairly well distributed rainfall over the country.

With the movement of an easterly wave from upper Burma, a low pressure area formed over east Pakistan and West Bengal on the 1st July. Moving slowly westwards, it became well-marked on the 3rd morning when it lay over Gangetic West Bengal and Chota Nagpur. Continuing to move slowly westwards and weakening into a diffuse 'low', it lay over northeast Madhya Pradesh on the 5th and merged into the seasonal trough the next day. In association with this 'low', the Bay branch of the monsoon became active and there was a spell of good rainfall in Gangetic West Bengal, Chota Nagpur and east Madhya Pradesh from the 3rd to 5th. Jamshedpur recorded 18 cm of rain on the 3rd and Gondia 14 cm on the 5th.

A high level trough appeared over the Gulf of Cambay and neighbourhood on the 4th and persisted there till it weakened by the 7th. In association with this, the Arabian Sea branch of the monsoon strengthened. It was vigorous over the Konkan on the 6th when Ratnagiri recorded 22 cm of rain and Bombay (Colaba) 16 cm.

In association with a westerly wave which moved across the extreme north of the country, the monsoon extended into Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) and Himachal Pradesh as a feeble current on the 9th. It extended further into Jammu-Kashmir and northeast and west Rajasthan on the 11th, again as a feeble current. An easterly wave which moved across the Arakan coast and the north Bay was responsible for the strengthening of the Bay branch of the monsoon over the northeast India and in Madhya Pradesh between the 12th and 14th. The Arabian Sea branch also strengthened over Konkan, Gujarat and Saurashtra-Kutch during the period 13th to 15th. Dahanu reported a very heavy fall of 22 cm on the 14th and another 20 cm on the next day. Bhavnagar recorded 20 cm on the 15th and Bombay (Santacruz) 16 cm on the 14th. Railway, road and telegraph communications in some parts of Saurashtra-Kutch were reported to have been dislocated as a result of heavy rains. Several villages and towns were also reported to have been isolated by the floods.

A low pressure area which formed over the north Bay on the 18th moved into Gangetic West Bengal and neighbourhood on the 19th and into southeast Uttar Pradesh and adjoining Chota Nagpur on the 20th. It served to maintain the activity of the monsoon over the region extending from Gangetic West Bengal to southwest Uttar Pradesh between the 18th and 22nd. Moving westwards, the low was over southeast Rajasthan and neighbourhood on the 22nd. It then moved northwards through the Punjab (I) and broke up over the Punjab hills by the 25th. In association with this 'low', widespread and locally heavy rain occurred in east Rajasthan on the 22nd and 23rd and in the Punjab (I) between the 23rd and 26th. Guna recorded 20 cm and Kotah 19 cm on the 22nd and Dalhousie 23 cm on the 25th. Uttar Pradesh also received fairly widespread rainfall between the 19th and 24th. Although the monsoon was generally weak over the country during the last week of the month, well-distributed light to moderate rainfall occurred in most parts of the country outside northeast India, Rajasthan, west Madhya Pradesh and Saurashtra-Kutch. Due to the passage of several westerly waves across the extreme north of the country, the monsoon was moderately active in Jammu-Kashmir during the latter half of the month.

The total rainfall during the month was in moderate excess in Rajasthan east, Saurashtra and Kutch and Konkan and in slight excess in Rayalaseema, Madras and Kerala, normal in the Bay Islands, Assam, Bengal, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, Uttar Pradesh, Punjab (I), Madhya Pradesh east, Coastal Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and Coastal Mysore, in slight defect in Jammu-Kashmir, Madhya Pradesh west, Gujarat, Maharashtra, Mysore north and south, in moderate defect in Orissa and Vidarbha and in large defect in Rajasthan west and Arabian Sea islands. Data in respect of Himachal Pradesh are not available. Averaged over the plains of India, the rainfall during the month of July was in defect by 5 per cent.

June and July combined—The significant feature of the monsoon of 1957 was its abnormally late advance into most parts of the country. Even after its advance, the monsoon remained generally weak during June but was somewhat more active in July. A notable feature in July was the absence of well-marked monsoon depressions. In spite of this, well-distributed light to moderate rain occurred in most parts of the country and at the end of July the rainfall was in moderate or large defect only in Orissa, west Rajasthan and Vidarbha.

The total rainfall during June and July was in large excess in Rayalaseema, in moderate excess in Bay Islands and Kerala, in slight excess in Rajasthan east, Saurashtra and Kutch, Konkan and Mysore south. It was normal in Assam, Gangetic West Bengal, Punjab (I), Gujarat, Maharashtra, Coastal Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, Madras, Coastal Mysore and Mysore North. It was in slight defect in Sub-Himalayan West Bengal, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh, in moderate defect in Orissa and Vidarbha and in large defect in Rajasthan west. Data in respect of Himachal Pradesh, Jammu and Kashmir and Arabian Sea islands are not available. Averaged over the plains of India, the rainfall during the period June and July was in defect by 8 per cent.

The following table gives for each sub-division and for the Indian areas as a whole the total rainfall during the period, its departure from normal and the percentage departure from normal.

2. CONDITIONS HAVING INFLUENCE ON THE RAINS OF AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER 1957

A foreshadowing of the monsoon rainfall of June to September was issued early in June. Recent data have been examined to see if any useful supplementary foreshadowing for the remainder of the season can now be given. The relevant data are the following:—

Indian Pressure—In June pressure was generally slightly above normal throughout the country. In July also it was slightly above normal throughout the country except in some parts of northwest India. Averaged over the plains the pressure departure was +0.5 mb. in June and +0.3 mb. in July.

Snow in the mountain regions of Northwest India—The snowfall reports received from the Western Himalayas for June and July indicate that snowfall was nearly normal.

Indian Ocean Pressure—At Mauritius, pressure was in defect by .001 in. in June and .003 in. in July.

Java Rain—The monthly rainfall departures from October 1956 to February 1957 were +14 per cent, —3 per cent, 0 per cent, —12 per cent and +12 per cent respectively.

South Rhodesia Rain—Rainfall from October 1956 to April 1957 was in defect by 0.3 inch.

South American Pressure—Pressure departures were as follows:—

	Buenos Aires	Cordoba	Santiago
June 1957	+0.4 mm	+0.3 mm	+0.9 mm
July 1957	—0.1 mm	—0.3 mm	—0.1 mm

Punjab Temperature Range—Departure of the Punjab Temperature Range $\frac{1}{2}$ (April+May) 1957 was —1.7°F.

Indo-Gangetic River Discharges—Mean departure of the total river discharges during April and May 1957 was +95 (in 10,000 cusecs).

3. INFERENCES FROM THE DATA

In foreshadowing the August and September rainfall in Peninsula (taken to consist of Bombay State, Madhya Pradesh (excluding Madhya Bharat, Bhopal and Vindhya Pradesh areas), Mysore North, Coastal Mysore (excluding South Kanara), and Telangana), the chief factors in the order of decreasing reliability, as judged by the available data are Mauritius Pressure, Pressure Distribution in India, south Rhodesia Rain and Java Rain. This year all the four factors are indifferent. The statistical analysis however indicates that there is a four to one chance that the total rainfall of August and September 1957 in the Peninsular will be above 87 per cent of the normal.

For Northwest India (taken to consist of the Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) including Himachal Pradesh and Delhi, and Rajasthan), the factors used in the order of decreasing reliability, as judged by the available data, are South American Pressure, Indo-Gangetic River Discharges, South Rhodesia Rain, Indian Pressure and Punjab Temperature Range. This year Punjab Temperature Range is very favourable, South American Pressure is slightly favourable, Indian Pressure and South Rhodesia Rain are indifferent and River discharges are very unfavourable. The statistical analysis indicates that there is a four to one chance that the August-September rainfall of this year in Northwest India will be above 85 per cent of the normal.

4. SUMMARY

The total rainfall of August and September 1957 is likely to be about normal both in the Peninsula and Northwest India.
